T.13 PERIODICALS

The following alphabetical list provides abbreviations for the names of English language periodicals that are commonly cited or difficult to abbreviate, and for individual words commonly found in periodical titles. In some instances, the list indicates that a word should not be abbreviated.

To use this list, first ascertain the correct name of the periodical you wish to cite. Always use the title of the periodical that appears on the title page of the issue you are citing. If the title of the periodical has changed over time, do not use an older or newer form of the title. Check to see if the periodical title you wish to cite is listed in the left-hand column of this list. If it is, you will find the full abbreviation for that periodical in the right-hand column.

Note that preferred abbreviation conventions for individual journals may differ from those listed in this table. The abbreviation conventions listed here are primarily intended to serve a national audience and to indicate clearly the source being cited.

If the periodical you wish to cite does not appear in this list, structure the abbreviation by looking up each word of the title in this table and in the list of geographical abbreviations found in table T.10. Assemble the abbreviations for each word to form the full abbreviated title. Omit the words "a," "at," "in," "of," and "the" (but retain the word "on"). If any word is listed neither here nor in table T.10, use the full word in the abbreviated title. Also, if the title consists of only one word after the words "a," "at," "in," "of," and "the" have been omitted, do not abbreviate the remaining word. Rule 6.1(a) explains the spacing of abbreviations.

If a periodical title itself contains an abbreviation, use that abbreviation in the abbreviated title:

▶ IMF SURV.

Omit commas from periodical title abbreviations, but retain other punctuation:

▶ Peter H. Huang & Ho-Mou Wu, More Order Without More Law: A Theory of Social Norms and Organizational Cultures, 10 J.L. ECON. & ORG. 390 (1994).

▶ Nineteen States Adopt Code of Judicial Conduct, OYEZ! OYEZ!, Feb. 1974, at 11.

If a periodical has been renumbered in a new series, indicate that fact:

▶ Jill Martin, The Statutory Sub-Tenancy: A Right Against the World?, 41 CONV. & PROP. LAW. (n.s.) 96 (1977).

For periodical abbreviations in languages other than English, see rules 20.2.3 and 20.6.
