

Missing Person in Paris Ad

2 years ago, the whole global community except Syria and Nicaragua signed an accord on global warming mitigation in Paris. The principle was that countries all over the world agreed to stop releasing carbon dioxide (CO₂) at the agreed amount to the air because the scientific reason showed that global warming was manmade. Later, 2 protesters: Syria and Nicaragua agreed to sign Paris Accord.

It was regretting that, last June, President Trump who should be the world leader announced for America to withdraw from this Paris Accord. He simply said that global warming was made up by scientists. There were no reliable supporting researches. It was fake news for increasing business transaction costs.

I believe that Trump's main reason is politics. His main supporters are a lot of unemployed white Americans and mine workers. He might have been influenced by the strong right-wing advisor like Steve Bannon.

1. He announced the withdrawal from Paris Accord to promote more jobs for his supporters.
2. This led to increasing employment in the mining industry.

From such approach, there was an observation that he lacked morality. He did everything to secure his popularity. However, he did not care for the incoming global problems. From Trump's policy, instead of being the world leader, he focused on America First.

The existing global warming needs cooperation from all countries including the superpower like the U.S. Despite Trump's announcement of withdrawal from Paris Accord, the U.S. mayors and large state governors like California obviously protested Trump and supported Paris Accord.

Moreover, the U.S. world-class scientists do not get research support from Trump's government. However, they get support from Macron, the President of France to continue working on their researches in France on global warming. It shows that Trump's policy on cutting off global warming research fund causes troubles to the American academics but benefits other countries. It is like brain drain policy. It contradicts to Trump's job creation policy.

During the 2-month anniversary, government leaders were invited to join the convention in Paris. Trump was missing. Therefore, this week's topic is about Trump. An interesting point is leader issue. What can we learn from the case of bad leaders who got elected as the president? How can we solve this problem for the U.S.? I believe that the case like this rarely happens.

We are lucky to see trump's roles. Nobody has ever expected that he would have the behaviors like bad manner, rudeness, selfishness and aggressiveness.

However, all of these have already happened. From bad aspects, there are some good things. We can learn that the good use of direct media to people like Twitter can be useful. However, Trump's most Twitter usage attacks rivals instead of contributing to the society.

The final point we can learn from Trump is that he fights against the opposition media. He called them "Fake News". It reflects Thai politics in the future that media's roles in the digital age have both good and bad points. If Thai media cause trouble to the society, there should be brave people to say that they are Fake News. Then, Thai media must play more responsible roles. We can always learn some lessons from the bad leaders.
